This Poster will be replaced as we finalise our programme of interesting presentations, we can however announce with delight, our two 'not to be missed' main speakers:

Robert Alleyne

Robert came into the public eye through his involvement in Dog Borstal.

He will be talking about his experiences of dog training and posing the question 'Do dog-training classes contribute to aggression?' Robert is not only an experienced pet dog training instructor, he is author of 'The Trouble-free Dog', an ex-Dog Warden of many years, Secretary of the UKRCB, and a Board Member of the KCAI Scheme.

Dr John Bradshaw

John is Director of the Anthrozoology Institute at Bristol University. Since 2009 he has focused his attention on communicating the latest advances in canine science to the dog-owning public worldwide. His recent book "In Defence of Dogs"/"Dog Sense" has featured in the best-seller lists in both the UK and the USA. He will be talking about the comparison between the wolf and the dog's social structures to understanding dog behaviour, and also about how dogs perceive and interpret the world, focusing particularly on the sense of smell.
